

Med Students Urge Congress To Find SGR Fix

Emily P. Walker

More than 200 medical students, hailing from 30 states across the U.S., descended on Capitol Hill today to participate in the AMA's student lobbying day.

Their main message was a familiar one: Find a permanent fix for the sustainable growth rate (SGR) formula.

One group of medical students from Michigan met with the staff of Sen. Carl Levin (D-Mich.) to discuss the 28 percent cut in Medicare reimbursement due to take effect on March 1.
