

Law School Applications Down; Could It Happen To Med Schools?

Skeptical Scalpel

The number of people applying to law schools is in steep decline. So says a recent post on a website called "The National Jurist."

The post cited some remarkable statistics from the American Bar Association. In 2012, law school applicant numbers were down 14% from 2011 and 23% from 2010.

For the fall of 2012, there were 44,481 first-year law students enrolled, a drop of about 4,000 from 2010.

Many schools have decreased enrollments with more than 90 cutting class sizes by more than 10%.

On January 2, 2013, the Wall Street Journal said, "The Bureau of Labor Statistics estimates that the economy will provide 21,880 new jobs for lawyers annually between 2010 and 2020; law schools since 2010, however, have produced more than 44,000 graduates each year."

For the non-math majors, that's a ratio of more than two graduates for every job.

There are way too many lawyers around anyway.

Continue reading... [1]

Source URL (retrieved on 03/06/2015 - 9:31pm):

http://www.surgicalproductsmag.com/blogs/2013/02/law-school-applications-down-could-it-happen-med-schools?qt-most_popular=0&qt-digital_editions=0&qt-recent_videos=0

Links:

[1] <http://skepticalscalpel.blogspot.com/2013/02/law-school-applications-are-way-down.html>